Trump for President? by Holly Virgin

It is that exciting time again! We will be choosing one man or woman to guide and make important decisions for all American people. In the top of the polls is the infamous Donald Trump. He is outspoken to say the least and the students and staff at Rivercrest have quite the opinion about him.

When asked the question, "What is your honest opinion about Trump?" Many people gave me the same smirk and "Are you sure?" look. Gianni Hewit answered, "Honestly, just because he is rich he thinks he knows politics."

Others also had a less than enthusiastic view of Trump. Cara Chavez, Guidance Counselor, shared that she thinks he is "pompous and arrogant, and has shown himself to be demeaning to women."

In all, most people decided they would not be voting for Donald Trump this year.

To lighten the mood, I asked the most popular question on the Internet, "What would you compare to Trump's hair?" This was the most enjoyable part for everyone. Everyone had an answer including corn silk, a Ken doll, a mop, toothpaste, and my favorite, a horrible fuzzy pillow.

Who will you be voting for?

Atom Mong

Student of the Month for September—Atom Mong

Atom Mong is the Rivercrest Student of the Month for September. He was nominated by his teacher, Ms. Maria Mosqueda because of his dedication to his education.

Ms. Mosqueda said that Atom is respectful to the school staff and to fellow students and is responsible about attending his classes on two campuses. Not only is he taking Geometry here at Rivercrest, but he also takes three classes at Jurupa Valley: Advanced Horsemanship, AP World History, and Art Fundamentals.

Atom arrives at school and greets everyone with a warm smile, then he signs in and gets to work.

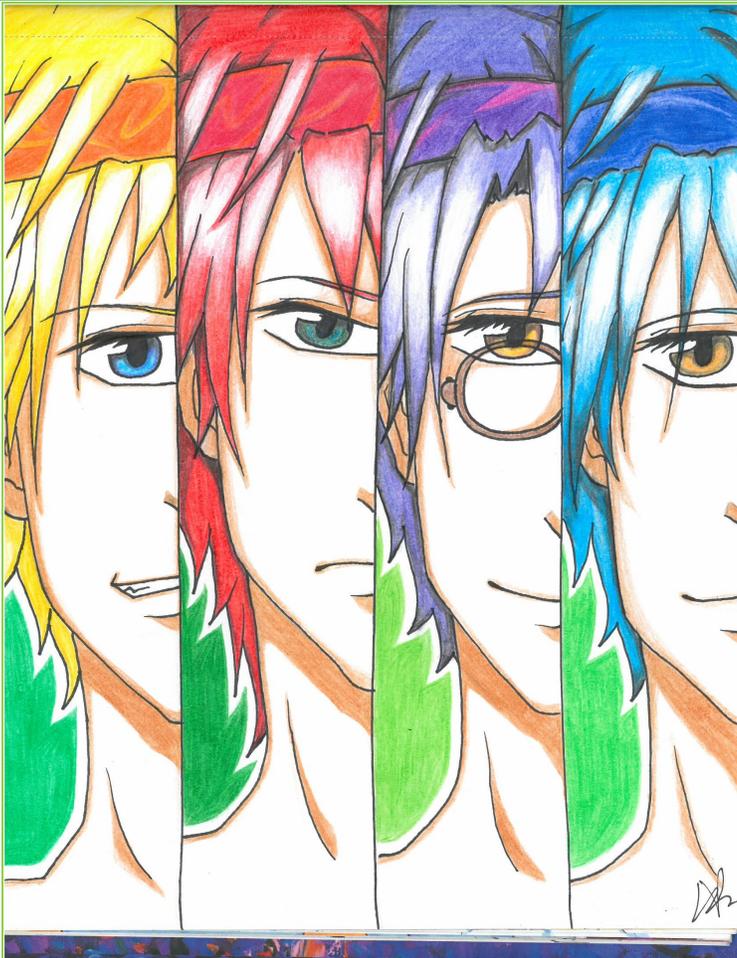

He is a positive example for all students because he is able to successfully manage his time in order to work on his currently assigned class at Rivercrest and his three class at Jurupa Valley.

Congratulations, Atom, for doing a great job!

Dealing with the Loss of a Friend by Angelique Park

Some friends leave and sometimes it hurts more than break ups. You may feel alone and hurt, maybe even miss them everyday. It's okay to have these feelings of depression for the loss of someone very close to you, someone you thought would have been there no matter what. But sometimes it's for the better; you can't keep wishing for them to forgive you for something you didn't do or talk to you about something you did do.

However, in some situations it's needed, especially if you know you did something wrong. Though, later on they might come back to work things out. Because whatever they saw or heard must have affected them negatively enough to have them block you out and drop you as a friend. Sometimes the person needs time.

Just remember, the ones who count would at least try to fix it and if the person doesn't even try then there isn't much you can do. You can still love them and wish for the best for them but you can't make a person listen to your side to hear the truth. You can just hope that they come back.

Don't let yourself believe that you aren't worthy of a true friend or feel down because somehow you failed them as a friend or vice versa. You are worth it always!
